Writeup;

Torn from my original world without warning and set adrift without a choice of my destination, I at least had a choice of benefits I'd get with each jump, an adaptive body mod, and a neat storage item.

My first jump found me headed to the world of a /collared/ fic I'd read previously, a cyberpunk shithole lousy with cute anthros. With my build, I dropped into the slums near where the story kicked off, taking up a role as a ripperdoc running my own clinic. I even used the free group follower to give myself a cute little receptionist, a dog girl by the name of Donna with a full set of cybernetic limbs and a fetish for taking them off.

While my practice and Donna took up most of my time during this first decade, I did take the time out to fuck with the plot - interrupting Chloe's plan and working with her mother to give the family a leg up. They got shelter, decent food, healthcare, education, and more and I got some help around the clinic. When I left, they got to keep the local version of my clinic when I shifted to my next destination.
