

Harry Potter and the Deathly Weapons

By zellat451

Version 1.1

The Setting

Welcome to the United States of America, Jumper!

The year is 1991, and today is July 4th (of course it is), giving you ample time to situate yourself in this world. You will need it.

In this world exist a particular kind of people, a people capable of wondrous things. They could heal, they could hurt, all with but a thought and a wave of a hand. In this world, Jumper, exist witches, wizards, and magical creatures.

Wonders of magic were born daily, impossibility after impossibility created without stop or lack of creativity, and this fantastical world flourished with the help of the magical arts. But, quickly, it all changed around 500 B.C., when the first “wand” was created.

The sleek frame, the power coursing through, drove more than a few mad in their quest of further greatness, as better and more powerful “wands”, now known as “guns”, were created. The most legendary of all are known to be the personal weapons of Dark Lords for a good reason.

But the Light triumphed again and again across the world, putting to a stop the chase for power of the Dark. Still, the magical side of the world was forced into hiding in the 1600s, when the muggles (non-magicals) finally had enough of them, and discovered the power of their own, mundane guns.

The last two Dark Lords to have graced this world are undoubtedly the worst of the lot.

Gellert Grindelwald had a hand in starting and continuing World War Two, culminating in a legendary duel against his former friend Albus Dumbledore, at the end of which he was defeated. His constant attacks on the muggles with his preferred spell have led to him inadvertently inspiring muggle scientists to reproduce their own, mundane version of the dreaded Nuclearfyre, leading to the end of the muggle side of the war.

As for Tom Marvolo Riddle, the self-titled Lord Voldemort, he attempted, and almost succeeded, in taking over all of the states with his army of Death Eaters. He was eventually brought low during Halloween 1981 after attempting to cast the AK-davra on a child fated to one day defeat him, Harry Potter, in a complete accident. This caused the child to be celebrated as a hero.

This year, Harry Potter, the Boy-Who-Lived, scarred with the image of a gun on his forehead, is beginning his schooling at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, premier school of magic in the US.

And you will go along with him, in this world of Deathly Weapons.

Background

Origin

There isn't really an Origin in this Jump. Everything in here is led by your focus. You may choose, however, to either be a drop in or be part of an existing family (magical or not) of your choice, although your parentage may not give you any direct advantages and will be representative of the "average".

Focus

*Your Focus gives you a discount of 50% on your Perks and Items lines. Discounted 100CP
Perks and Items are free.*

Scholar

You focus on magical knowledge, or really all knowledge, so long as it interests you. Your interests lie more on the theoretical and directly magical side of Magic, such as charms and arithmancy. You are a scholar at heart, Jumper, and there is so much to learn.

Artisan

You focus on magical crafts of all kinds. Your interests lie more on the practical applications and indirectly magical side of Magic, such as magical items and potions. You are an artisan at heart, Jumper, and there is so much to do.

Age and Sex

You are 11 years old, Jumper, and that is non-negotiable. Your sex is yours to decide. You'll receive a special letter later in the day, by owl, to enroll you in your new magical school.

Good luck with puberty, Jumper.

Location

New York

The Big Apple. One of the most well-known cities in the US, and where you may find the entrance to a magical station where the Hogwarts Express passes through.

As for you, you live somewhere near the Grand Central Terminal, where the magical station is situated (in one of the walls, somewhere), and close to the only magical shopping district in the eastern part of the states.

Texas

The origin place of “wands”, better known as magical guns. A lot of history to see around here. Don't worry, you will find your way to the train when needed. Until then, enjoy your time in the state of Texas, young cow...wizard?

North of Michigan

You are at the junction between Lake Superior and Ontario, Canada. You can see Hogwarts clearly in the distance, for you are currently living in Hogsmeade, a fully magical village.

Somewhere in Europe

On the other side of the pond, huh? Why you would choose this, I have no idea. If you so wish, your letter may be coming from another magical school instead.

Perks

General

Faster Than Jumper's Shadow (100)

Sometimes, Jumper, you need to take hold of something, and fast. This Perks is for these situations. From now on, whatever you have on your person, be it in a pocket, a bag, or other, will instantly appear in your hands whenever you want to hold it.

This is not teleportation, you are just that quick on the draw. However, this only works for what you have on your person, and nothing else.

The Jumper-Who-Jumped (100)

You may now choose yourself a title, Jumper, something for everyone else to know you by. No one else will be able to use it without seemingly copying you in the eyes of everyone else, and everyone you meet will somehow already know to call you by it, though they won't wonder why that is.

Do try to choose something at least slightly serious, otherwise you will risk being hounded by nosy people wanting to know the story behind that name.

You may choose a different title for every Jump.

A Magical Movie (Free / 200)

You are capable of utilizing the magic style of the Potterverse, Jumper. However, this very versatile ability has been altered for this setting.

You gain, like all wizards, the innate ability to create magical bullets in firearms of all kinds that you are carrying, essentially giving you infinite ammunition which do not produce recoil, so long as you have the power to spare.

Basic magical bullets will act as normal bullets to muggles and other non-magical beings, but will only cause intense pain to supernatural beings, if anything at all. Magical bullets can be imbued with spells, which alters their function. So you could shoot bullets to repair glasses, which wouldn't hurt anyone no matter what, or a bullet made to attack the soul, which would definitely kill the target, muggle or not.

Unless the spell is meant to kill, supernatural beings will recover from any and all wounds caused by them in time. You may still choose to have them cause entirely cosmetic wounds, for the fun factor. Actual, mundane bullets will still work as normal on you, though.

Additionally, this power naturally grants you an extended lifespan, about twice as long as a normal human's, as well as a supernaturally healthy body.

Finally, your magic will sometimes answer your moments of emotional distress via accidental magic. This will cause you magic to naturally create a temporary gun in your hands, loaded with a special magical bullet that you will fire on reflex, the effects of which being dependent on your desires at the time. Accidental magic cannot be forced by any means, although wandless magic can be learned by trying to do so.

Should you pay 200CP, you may grant the potential to use this magic style to anyone you want by touch, and may cause magical creatures to start appearing across all worlds you go to, either as you arrive or retroactively.

Firearmouth (200)

You have a strange power, Jumper. You can instinctively speak to, and understand, guns and firearms. This could be really useful. It is very disconcerting to hear, however, what with all the rapid-fire explosions.

At the start, you might absentmindedly start using this language whenever looking at a gun.

The Power of Love (400) (capstone booster)

Through the Power of Love™, you gain complete immunity to magic bullets and other supernatural attacks of any kind and any level of power.

Unfortunately, this has a few hard limits. Firstly, it will only block the magic of a single person of your choice in the entire Jump, your "Fated Enemy", which you can switch every 10 years.

Secondly, this shield only works against actual supernatural attacks, powers which were used with the intent of killing you, or had the potential to do so. It will not counter mind-reading, a tickling spell, or even a torture spell.

Finally, this Perk will not help you against the laws of physics. Try to avoid getting targeted by Nuclearfyre as you will feel the full brunt of the heat, the caster being your "Fated Enemy" or not.

Aside from this targeted and limited anti-magic effect, your touch will cause your Fated Enemy to rather slowly burn to ashes and melt on touch, to the point that only a pile of ash will be left of them should you keep direct contact for over two minutes.

And as an additional gift, this Perk guarantees you a single resurrection from any kind of death every 10 years, so long as you were killed by your Fated Enemy, should you wish to be resurrected (you may spend this after someone fixed up your corpse).

All of this is selectively toggleable as you wish.

Scholar

The Brightest Discharge of a Generation (100)

You have learned how to learn, Jumper.

You will understand any new knowledge taught to you over the course of a single class for basics and medium level knowledge, and barely a week's worth for more complex subjects. Similarly, you get practical things down after a single hour of demonstration unless it is extremely difficult, at which point it will take a week of focused lessons to achieve.

This doesn't help you with the requirements to use what you learn, such as getting a good memory for the patronus.

Steel Trap (100)

You don't forget, Jumper. Well, this is rather selective in that it only works for knowledge that you read in books, but so long as it is in a book and you read it, you may recall the pages in your mind at any time, forever.

It might take a while to browse through all of that knowledge, though.

Boom, Headshot! (200)

You have pinpoint accuracy with and control of whatever you hold in your hands, Jumper, especially in the case of guns. You will never miss a shot if your target doesn't dodge, so long as you could possibly make it.

The Road To Hell... (200)

...Is probably somewhere down in the Ministry of Magic's Department of Mysteries. That is almost certain. What is more certain than even that, is that people are very forgiving towards you, Jumper.

Your mistakes will seem all the lesser so long as you claim, and can somewhat reliably prove, that you did it "for the greater good".

Do keep in mind that those people have to at least care to absolve you of your mistakes. Some will definitely remember that "for the greater good" was Grindlewald's catchphrase before it was yours.

Bombardier (400)

You are good, really good with the “bombarda” spell. You know how to explode anything at any visible level. You know how to make destructive explosions, flashes of light, explosive sounds, shaped charges, and even heat waves, all separately, all without fail.

Bigger and more controlled explosions take more magic to create, but you can achieve them all, if you care to try.

Additionally, you are capable of replacing your initial magic bullets with magic grenades, giving your spells a slight area of effect, a few feet wide at most.

Say it with me, Jumper: Art is an Explosion!

Ritualist (400)

You have a good hand for rituals of all kinds, Jumper. If a ritual that you are conducting fails, you can expect highly diminished effects at best, and nothing at worst, but never negative backlashes.

You are capable of adapting all spells you know as rituals that give something, or someone, their properties permanently, as some kind of strangely sourced enchantment. However, these rituals tend to be very complex and costly to perform, and even more difficult to undo.

Finally, the more guns you add to any ritual, the higher the chances of success. You won't ensure your success each and every time through this effect, but it will give you a distinct advantage.

Walking Arsenal (600)

Your mind holds the knowledge of a lot of spells, and the skills to use them. Your knowledge and sheer skill on that subject is equal to Dumbledore himself.

You are not equal in magical power to Dumbledore, yet. You are, however, capable of wandless, or gunless, magic. You can shoot spells with finger-guns at half the power, or really from any part of your body.

Boosted - Head(master)hunter

You are now equal in magical power to Dumbledore. You can shoot basic spells all day long without needing rest. You also possess the knowledge of all magic, rituals, and spells known to all named characters in the original series, but gun-adapted. Yes, this includes the creation of horcruxes, so you can shoot at your own soul ya sicko.

Additionally, your wandless magic is as powerful as if you were holding a common, well-matched wand, and completely instinctive to use.

It is a lot of power to have, Jumper.

Omniglot (600)

You are gifted with languages, Jump, in a way no one else is. You can speak to and understand all living sentient creatures, from men to spiders, and they all tend to naturally like you. All generally non-sapient beings will follow your orders more often than not, and be willing to negotiate in the latter case. They also gain enough intelligence to be equivalent to a normal human when interacting with you, or acting directly for your benefit.

Boosted - Swiss Army Wizard

Your mastery of transfiguration is nothing short of shocking, Jumper. It has fused with your natural gift for understanding creatures to become something greater.

You can now transform into any creature, object, or mix thereof, entirely or selectively as you wish, by sheer will alone. By observing your target for long enough and understanding it, you may even replicate their magical powers and properties.

Additionally, the intelligence gain for creatures that interact with you can now be made permanent, should you so wish.

Finally, you are capable of fusing things together and separating them with your magic, perfectly safely. You may now create chimeras of meat and metal as wild as your imagination can go, among many other things.

Have you ever wanted a sapient, living tank engine, Jumper?

Artisan

Loremaster (100)

You know your gun, Jumper. You can take a single look at any magical focus, and instantly know what it is made of. Your memory for magical foci is perfect, never forgetting them once seen, as well as their users, and you can recognize them on sight.

Point and Shoot (100)

You are capable of great focus whenever you need, Jumper, allowing you to utterly ignore most distractions in your environment and do your work to the best of your abilities.

Be careful, however. Tunnel vision can be a very dangerous thing in the wrong situation.

First Step In Solving Any Problem (200)

Take this enormous creativity boost, Jumper. You will never lack new ideas, all you need now is the ability to make them reality.

Also, you have a knack for understanding what kind of trinkets people could really use in their lives, just by observing them for a short time.

Minute Man (200)

You are very quick, Jumper, when it comes to performing maintenance on your works.

You are so fast, in fact, that you could entirely disassemble a mortar cannon the height of a castle in its component parts, clean them all until they shine, reassemble everything perfectly, and do your last testing reps in ten. Minutes. Flat.

The bigger they get, the longer it takes. But if you know how it works inside and out, you can apply this Perk's effect to it, irrespective of the thing's size or of what it is.

Keep in mind that this only helps you if the thing can be disassembled with what you have. You won't be taking a potion apart into its component ingredients without some wild magic.

And yes, not only may you skip the "reassemble" part if you just want to field strip your gun for some reason, you can also skip the start and just "assemble" things you have the components for extremely fast, although that last part will only be affected by this Perk if you've already made one of it before.

Lastly, be careful. This may allow you to skip a lot of building and tearing down time, but this will consume your stamina and other energy resources at an accelerated pace, too. So make sure to have the energy to do whatever it is you're trying to do at the normal pace, first.

Bob the Wizard (400)

You are really, really good with the “reparo” spell. In fact, you have mastered it to the point that you can achieve two things with it. Using this spell, you may reverse the flow of time, and rearrange matter, within an area about the size of a small house.

You know how to repair anything at any visible level. You can fix cracks, stick back separated pieces of matter, age old materials backwards, unwarp and unmelt metal, make disintegrated matter reappear, heal injuries, cure sickness, un-cook food, un-mix potions into base ingredients, and even repair failing magical wards, all without fail.

This won't help you fix old age in people on its own, however, as living matter resists time manipulation (but not matter rearrangement) to the point that your area of effect in this case is diminished to the size of a finger. And you really don't want to try making someone younger one finger at a time, Jumper, this is not good for the body. On the positive side, you can fix bullet wounds and reattach limbs with no problem.

Bigger and more controlled repairs take more magic, and this doesn't help with objects that were entirely removed from existence, as you need a target for the magic to impact, but you don't need to know what you're doing or what the end result is supposed to be.

Just let the magic flow, Jumper, and everything will work out, like hitting Ctrl+Z on the world.

I Roll To Shoot My Gun (400)

And you don't need to do anything else, Jumper.

A quirk of your magic, Jumper, is that it was... infected with your accidental magic, in some way. Because of that, it is capable of answering to your desires that relate to crafting, in a very specific manner.

From now on, should you ever touch and use a tool of any kind, used for any kind of craft, your magic may replicate that tool's effects whenever you need it. You can, as such, fake the operation of all tools you could possibly need by using your magic gun instead.

Lacking a cauldron? Shoot the potions ingredients. Lacking a needle? Shoot the fabric and threads. Lacking a warding kit? Shoot your house. Lacking a saw? Shoot that tree, then the planks... You get the idea.

It doesn't make things go faster, however. It just removes the need for specialized facilities and tools, without a loss in the quality of your work.

And keep in that that yes, your magic may replicate the unique effects of legendary tools or similar, but this will cause you a drain so enormous that it might not be worth even trying.

Jumpers, Makers of Fine Guns (600)

You, Jumper, possess deep and instinctive knowledge of how to make magical “wands” (read “guns”), and how to match them to specific people.

This applies to other types of supernatural energies and foci, allowing you to personalize them to specific users and bring the most out of their potential.

Boosted - Merchant of Death

You, Jumper, possess deep and instinctive knowledge of how to produce any kind of magical item, but with a greater focus on things that have to do with death and killing.

You can produce wonders of magical crafting, like the legendary three Deathly Weapons, or the Founder’s artifacts, given enough time and resources.

Speaking of which, you will never lack resources for your craft. Even in worlds devoid of magic, you can always make do with what you have at your disposal and locally sourced materials.

I Didn’t Pass A Mastery To Be Called “Professor” (600)

You, Jumper, are as good as a potions master, if not better. You possess a great talent at making all kinds of potions, regardless of their complexity level. If you have the ingredients and the recipe, you can make it without fail every single time.

Additionally, it appears that you do not suffer from the increasing toxicity of what you drink. A poison will poison you, still. But if that potion didn’t poison you the first time, it never will, no matter what quantity you take of it.

Boosted - It’s My New Product. I Call It “Gunpowder”

You, Jumper, possess deep and instinctive knowledge of Alchemy, equal to Nicolas Flamel. You do not have skills equal to his, however, but you may easily get there in a decade or less.

Additionally, you also have a great talent at modifying all kinds of potions. In fact, not only could you easily make small alterations to all potions you know, and discover entirely new ones by extrapolating on your work, you could always find a way to make any and all potions and alchemical products you have the recipe for with your currently accessible environment and ingredients, even without any magic around.

Items

General

A "Wand" (Free)

A magical gun unique and matched to you. It amplifies the power of magical bullets used through it, as well as other supernatural powers, slightly. It also makes them easier to control and modify.

This was made by Ollivanders, Makers of Fine Guns Since 382 B.C.

The Answer (100)

An actual muggle revolver. It will never need maintenance. You get 12 bullets for its use, daily. No one will ask you for your permit for this one.

They say violence isn't an answer. Well, in this world, it certainly is the answer.

Shield Hat (200)

This, Jumper, is a Weasley's special Shield Hat. It is a cowboy hat that constantly protects its wearer with magic. You may choose its color.

It is far stronger than the commonly sold models, and all magic of medium power and under will be utterly ineffective against it. It will be like casting spells at a house. Keep in mind that, as a standard protective charm, there are spells that bypass it, including the dreaded AK-davra.

Should the shield be broken, it will spring back up at full power after 5 minutes, so long as the hat is in one piece. If it isn't, don't you worry, it will come back all fixed after a day.

The Greatest Mistake You Can Make (400)

...Is bringing a knife to a gun fight. And that is exactly what you just did, Jumper.

This is a blade of goblin make. It is actually a shotsword, but for a human like you it may as well be a long dagger.

It has all of the usual advantages of a goblin-made blade, however, such as the ability to absorb substances to make itself stronger. You are in luck, as this one comes already coated with Basilisk venom, one of the deadliest substances in the world.

Don't cut yourself, Jumper. You'll have about a minute left to find a sad phoenix if you do.

Time Revolver (600)

This is a revolver cast in fairy dust and solid gold. This beauty of magical engineering is an old 6 rounds revolver, with a mysterious power. Should you shoot someone with it, including yourself, it will take the victim 1 hour backwards in time.

This will start a closed time-loop. If you are ignorant of the concept, Jumper, simply know that you will not replace your past self, and events you have observed may not be changed through this form of time travel. Bad things will happen if you try, like removal from reality.

All rounds are replaced every day on the turn of midnight (universal time), giving you six extra hours every day.

Just keep in mind, Jumper, that this is a Time Revolver and not a Time Turner. Where the Time Turner can bring multiple people along for the ride and cannot work within a time-loop, the Time Revolver will only affect a single target at once and may be used during a time-loop. So, there could be as many as 7 of you running around at once, Jumper. What a lucky number indeed.

And yes, as is heavily implied, you may send someone else back in time without warning for your amusement.

One of Three Deathly Weapons (600) (Can Be Taken Once Each)

The Elder "Wand"

Also known as "The Death Stick", for good reason. This is a magical rocket launcher half the height of a grown adult. It amplifies the power of all spells used through it by nearly 100 times, and can give them a wide area of effect as well, up to a castle-sized area.

The Glock of Invisibility

A magical glock. All magical bullets shot with it will go right through magical barriers and opposing spells, or anything magical really, without resistance. All magic done through it cannot be detected by any means, not even visually.

The holder may fire a blank shot at themselves, or at others holding onto them. This causes the targets to go invisible until they lose contact with either the glock's holder, or the glock itself.

The Wesson of Resurrection

A magical Smith & Wesson Model pistol. All magical bullets shot with it will reanimate the cadavers they hit, to fight for the holder as zombies. All bullets fired may affect immaterial and non-beings such as ghosts, wraiths, and dementors.

The gun may be shot blank while calling a dead person's name, which causes a shade of their once-living self to appear. Shades hold all of their memories up to the point of their death and must obey the gun's holder. However, shades are immaterial and may not stay indefinitely in the living world.

Scholar

Holdout (100)

It's always good to have a holdout on you, should your main weapon fail you at an inopportune time. In this case, the weapon is your focused mind, and the holdout is a very neat quill to take notes with.

This quill will always be there when you need it, never cause ink splotches, and never run out of ink. What a wondrous thing.

In fact, should you really hate someone (or should you have really weird kinks I suppose), you could set the quill to write using the writer's blood as ink, with the optional side effect of carving words in the back of their hand. Just... keep in mind that that ink source will run out at some point. Try to stop a long while before then.

Report Files (100)

Or they could be, in the future. This, Jumper, is an infinitely refilling stack of very high quality magical parchment. You may write on it, fold it into paper planes, or set it on fire, your choice.

Each page has the particularity of correcting spelling mistakes automatically when they are not meant, and you may erase previously written things by willing it while touching it. Useful, innit?

Ammunition and Magazine (200)

Ammunition for a scholar, that is. These, Jumper, are your school books in a really neat pocket library. Sait pocket library can fit any number of hardcover books and never gain a pound in weight, and it can also shrink down to pocket size, lucky you.

Secret Chamber (200)

Not to be mistaken with "The Chamber of Secrets". This, Jumper, is a guarantee that any projectile-based weapon with a chamber-based mechanism that you use will a/ways have another shot, but only once every minute.

When you run out of ammos, just wait for a minute and you will have a new bullet in there. When your bullets are taken from you, this one will remain.

Though the secret chamber is completely undetectable, and only exists when you want it to, it cannot hold more than a single, common shot. So make it count, Jumper.

Marauder's Map (400)

You are in possession of your own copy of the Marauder's Map, Jumper.

Once opened, it will show you a multi-layered map of the surroundings, complete with the position and names of people, and the secret passages and their passwords.

However, beings which are not at least in part human won't show up on it, and it will only ever show your immediate surroundings within an area the size of a castle, so you won't be using this from a distance. It won't show traps and protections either.

Still, a great tool to track the movements of most people within your domain. And to plan your trip to that forbidden section of the library.

Brains In Jars (400)

This is a rather disgusting set of brains in jars, Jumper. They remain stuck in there forever.

These aren't just normal brains, to be clear. They are the brains of a multitude of seers, their talents still present somewhere in there. The jars are connected to a set of guns in a weirdly complex system, serving the brains as a... writing machine?

Who knows what whoever made that was thinking, but should you ask the brains a question about the future, they will carve their answer on the nearest surface using bullet impacts. It will always be a riddle, some clearer than others, but it will always be accurate.

Take heed, Jumper. They may only answer three of your questions per day. The cost of doing that much is a terrible head(brain?)ache that will leave them debilitated until the morrow.

Room of Armaments (600)

A room containing all the guns and shooting ranges you could ever want or think of. None of the harm caused inside this room is ever permanent.

The room can simulate any terrain and attack scenarios according to the wishes of the people inside. However, you can't take any of the guns outside of it. Although, you could use this as a research room, disassembling and studying this weaponry straight out of your wildest dreams.

This is accessible from your Warehouse, and all of your properties.

Mirror of Erised (600)

This is a large mirror, showing whoever is in front the things they most desire. It may also seal items inside of itself, to be released only for someone who knows that they are in there, but do not wish to use them.

For you, however, it also has another function. This mirror will, if you let it, show you a vague way to achieve your current desire using what you have. It won't give you the answers, but may reveal to you some pieces of knowledge otherwise left untouched.

For some reason, most of its answers have to do with guns, in some way or another. Perhaps you are simply fated, Jumper?

Artisan

Deluminator (100)

A very interesting piece of magical engineering. This, Jumper, is a Deluminator. It looks and feels like a gun, but it can't shoot to kill, or even hurt.

When fired at a lightsource of any kind smaller than a human head, the "bullet" will produce a shattering sound on impact and turn it off instantly, keeping it dark for a few hours.

You may also keep the trigger pressed to produce continuous shaped muzzle flashes leading you towards your objective, so long as you know what it looks like, you have seen it in person before, and you can hold its image in your mind.

Golden Snitch (100)

Another result of inspired magical engineering. This golden snitch is an extremely fast, flying golden ball half the size of a palm, with an empty center.

You may order it to follow you around, to bug someone you don't like, to wait at a specific place, or even to deliver very small, ring-sized items for you. Regardless, it will always come when you call for it

Peruvian Instant Darkness Powder (200)

A self-refilling cache of magical smoke bombs that create a deep, encroaching darkness on impact. It takes a while to fade, no one can see through it, and looks like a common rock until thrown. Very useful in a fight. You get 5 of them daily.

"Wand" Holster (200)

You know the drill by now, Jumper.

This is a magical gun holster. It will carry guns of any shape and any height in a small space, without feeling their weight. On top of that, the holster prevents the summoning of whatever is inside, unless it is done by its wearer, and it may summon back any gun attuned to it regardless of distance. You may attune a new gun by leaving it inside of the holster for a day.

Sorcerer's Stone (400)

Nope, not Philosopher's Stone. This is the American version of the story, after all.

This shiny red rock can create the elixir of life, which can freeze your aging process for an entire year, but can only be produced in sufficient quantity for a single person once every 6 months. It can also permanently turn any matter into gold, but very slowly. Finally, it can instantly transmute any kind of matter in an equal mass of powerful, magically-enhanced bullets that spells can stick to, and that will fit the shape of any gun chamber.

It only works on matter present within a foot of itself though, so don't go thinking you can turn the planet into bullets with this. Well, you could, but very slowly.

A World In The Palm Of Your Hand (400)

Or, well, an indestructible high quality trunk. It could easily be considered your own personal world though, in a manner of speaking.

This high quality magical trunk is as big as an entire manor on the inside, with plenty of rooms for your perusal. It is always fully stocked in essentials, cleans itself, and can be shrunk down to pocket size. Once shrunk, it weighs only as much as a feather.

The most interesting part, however, is this: The trunk has its own floor system, a set of hearths that can be used as portals to each other via a pinch of a special powder, of which count as an essential. This floor system of yours may access any portal network or equivalent in your current Jump, and deny entry to others as per the conditions you wish, but good luck figuring out the names and passwords for each entry point in the network.

Additionally, the trunk has a security system. It is bound to you, and should someone who isn't you try to open it without your permission, the trunk will eat them and keep them in a special, very cramped compartment, until you choose to release them. It won't stop them from apparating out, however, but it is very fun to watch a trunk trying to eat people.

Finally, you may reorganize the insides of the trunk at will, so long as you are touching it.

Fresh Cuts (600)

This, Jumper, is one metric ton worth of materials to craft with. It appears in a pile in your Warehouse, and replenishes monthly.

But the really interesting part about this pile, Jumper, is that you may choose what it replenishes with.

In this pile you may find any form of biological matter, or materials sourced from any sort of biological fauna and flora, sourced from any Jump you have ever gone to, so long as you have ever seen or touched them in person even once. The only exception being truly unique things.

One ton of wonders straight out of your wildest desires to play with, Jumper. Enjoy.

Bottled Nuclearfyre (600)

A bottle containing a sample of Grindelwald's favorite spell. Once the bottle is broken, the Nuclearfyre will burst out of it, incinerating everything around itself with extreme prejudice.

It starts as an enormous explosion, and follows with an intense fire that feeds on magic to keep growing. Even if cut off from any source, it has enough power to burn down an entire castle to ashes, the stone rubbles included. Set it loose inside of a place like Hogwarts, and you can kiss the entire county goodbye.

Be very careful with this, as no one really knows how to stop Nuclearfyre without cutting it off from all surrounding magical sources, and it may not always be possible, especially in worlds where magic is everywhere.

Companions

Reinforcements (100)

You may import up to 8 of your Companions with you here, or create new ones as you wish. They gain 600CP to spend on this document.

Cannon (Free)

That is no mistake, Jumper, I just felt like being funny. You may take anyone you can convince of following you as a Companion for free.

Neville Longdead (Free)

A zombie-like Neville Longbottom with a very distinctive head wound in the middle of his forehead. No one really knows when he died, or when he decided to stand back up despite that, and more curious is that his living counterpart is still running around. As such, no one will miss him.

He is great with plants, doesn't talk much, and doesn't decompose either, for some reason.

The Girl With No Name (200)

She does have one and it is "Lovegood". She won't answer to that, though. She may answer to "Luna", sometimes, when she feels like it, but these days are few and far between. And you better never even think of addressing her as "Eastwood", you will not like the consequences (or perhaps like them too much?).

Like her... less gun-crazy counterpart, this Lun- *cough* Girl With No Name sees interesting things everywhere, all the time, and believes in the existence of plenty more beyond that.

She spies for Nargles, hunts for Horned Snorkacks, fights ministry-wide conspiracies about rotting the teeth of the good citizens of the United States of America, and plenty more things besides. And she will try to drag you along in every. Single. One. of her adventures.

Because yes, Jumper, there will be adventures. As fantastical and downright stupid as the Girl With No Name's fantasies sound, they somehow all end up hiding enough truth behind them to bring her to great and adventurous times, and she will be taking you along for the ride, should you let her (even if you don't, sometimes).

This is due to her unique and entirely subconscious brand of magic which, contrary to her counterpart's, is more focused on altering reality to fit her fantasies, rather than showing her fantastic things. She, and you, will keep running into interesting things because she wants to. This could be a rather useful talent, if properly utilized.

At least, you won't know boredom by the side of this devil in a cowboy hat, Jumper. Though you might end up wishing you did.

Scenarios

Scenarios take place after the Jump, and a failure in them does not count towards your Chain. You would simply leave without rewards. You get as much time as you need to fulfill each scenario, unless otherwise specified. You may give up on scenarios at any time.

The Child With the Gun-Shaped Scar

Ten years ago, Jumper, on Halloween 1981, your family was attacked and killed by the Dark Lord Voldemort. He tried to murder you that same night, but his killing curse, the AK-davra, failed and rebounded against your forehead, destroying him and leaving you bearing a gun-shaped scar at the point of impact.

Ten years have passed, and soon, you will be rejoining the Wizarding World, as the shade of Lord Voldemort lurks in the shadows, planning his resurrection and your death by his hands.

You are now Harry Potter, child of prophecy, chewtoy of fate, or at least his replacement (which has no impact on your sex or appearance beyond the scar, fear not). Your goals are to kill Lord Voldemort once and for all, and survive until adulthood.

And no, you do not gain any of the Perks unless you take them, though being the Child-Who-Lived may give you downgraded versions of them by design. Good Luck.

Rewards

- +1000CP to use in this document.
- Harry Potter, But With Guns [Perk]

You, Jumper, have the special power to change the rules of the world as you arrive in it. That is not to say that you can change the story of the world, past or future, nor can you remove or add things to the setting itself.

But you can alter parts of the setting which are already present. In this instance, “Wizards use wands” became “Wizards use guns”. In the world of “The Lord of the Rings”, you could perhaps change “Elves are incredibly pretty” to “Elves are incredibly ugly”.

None of your changes will have an impact on the story of this world up to the point at which you arrive, as all events will come to pass as they should have regardless. However, they may have happened for different reasons than the original ones, and future events may be altered as a result of this.

- A Special Scar [Perk]

You were marked as special in this life, Jumper, and you may be so once again. In every world you go to, you may choose to hijack a prophecy to become one of its protagonists, although which prophecy and which protagonist exactly will be left up to chance.

In a world without prophecy, a new one, the only one, will be made specially for you, should you so wish. Choose wisely, for prophecies do have the power to play the world like a game of chess.

The Master of Death

Good news and bad news, Jumper. You are now a candidate for the title of Master of Death, and everyone knows about it.

If you want your fancy title and the rewards that come with it, you will need to gather all three Deathly Weapons and keep them for 10 consecutive years. Take as long as you need to do so, just beware of just how many people and organizations want your toys.

Rewards

- All Three Deathly Weapons [Item]

You gain all of the Deathly Weapons as Fiat Backed items, as if you had purchased them yourself. And if you already had them all from the start, well, take nothing as your punishment for making this scenario far less difficult (and interesting to watch).

- Death In The... Flesh? [Companion]

Congratulations, Jumper! You gain a new Companion: Death.

It's not as incredible a reward as it may seem. Death is the best shot in all worlds, an incredibly talented magic gunsmith, they can enchant your shit for free with death attributed magic (and similar effects) whenever you want, and they don't die. Ever.

That's about it. Oh! And they will never let you confirm either their appearance or anything else about them, wearing this heavy cloak all the time as they are.

For some reason, they are wearing a cowboy hat on top of the hood... Well, don't pry too far into it. Regardless, they are here to stay and follow you, their Master, if you will have them.

Quidditch World Champion

Your goal in this scenario comes in two parts, Jumper.

First, you need to somehow get good enough at quidditch to make it into the world league teams. Secondly, you need to lead your team to victory.

That's it, that's the whole scenario. The moment you are declared a World Champion of Quidditch is the moment you win. You may take as long as you want trying for this.

Just keep in mind that the quidditch style of this world is a lot more violent than you are used to. Players get shot off their brooms and fall into the dirt below, left for dead until the end of the match, quite often.

Rewards

- A Gold Medal In Murder [Perk]

You get the right to introduce a blood sport in any world you go to, as weird and magical as you want to make it. No one will question its existence or mechanics, and plenty of people will willingly decide to play it.

Don't worry, everyone will be fine while playing it and won't die during matches, most of the time. Unless, of course, you choose to disable this protection. But in the latter case, don't expect it to become a government-supported sport like it would otherwise be.

Drawbacks

All Drawbacks are removed at the end of the Jump, and that means before the Scenarios take place.

100CP Tier

Long Shot (+100)

You must stay for 10 more years. Only the first 3 times will give CPs. A wizard's lifespan is quite long, Jumper, but try not to overdo it.

Tremors (+100)

For some reason, your hands keep trembling and jerking violently whenever you are holding anything.

This won't actually cause you any problems trying to use your hands with precision somehow, but everyone will find it really weird.

Guntongue (+100)

From now on, you may only speak in gun-related sounds and onomatopoeia. No one will bother you about it, and they will actually understand you when you speak, but you won't understand yourself.

I hope that the discrepancy between your mind and reality won't cause you too many mental problems.

A Right Pain In The Ass (+100)

Somehow, someday, you always end up getting shot in the ass, Jumper.

At least twice a week, you will receive a bullet wound on your buttocks, regardless of the precautions you take to prevent this. And you will be forced to feel the pain of it for a full day before it may heal.

200CP Tier

Muggle Story (+200)

You have no magic of any kind until the end of the Jump. As a complete muggle, you are unable to see past magical wards as well, and your lifespan is decidedly lower.

The only difference is, unlike for a normal muggle, magic bullets will affect you as if you were a wizard.

Brother "Wand" (+200)

Someone holds a wand which is sibling to yours. All bullets you fire at each other will automatically be countered and drain your magic while doing so, until one of you is too exhausted to resist.

Not only does this make every one-on-one fight against that person a pain, you are also guaranteed to encounter them at least once a year at least as an enemy.

"Did you put your name in the Goblet of Fire?" (+200)

Everyone around you overreacts to everything "bad" they think you've done. They shout at you, point guns at your face, actually shoot you (but not to kill) in dire situations, ...

Casual violence is a common and recurring event for you, jumper.

Gun Safety Example (+200)

Wounds from basic magic bullets would normally heal over a few hours, if not minutes, and even faster with potions. They are simply cosmetic damage, not things that wizards have to worry about.

Well, not for you, Jumper. All magic bullet wounds you receive are still entirely cosmetic, but they will now heal only as fast as real bullet wounds would, and will also hurt like it, healing magic or not.

Be certain that people won't question your... particularity, but they are also very unlikely to care about holding back against you.

400CP Tier

Prophecy Kid (+400)

It is written in the start, Jumper. You are fated to kill a powerful person, and they won't leave you alone because of it.

Unlike for Harry Potter, everyone knows of the prophecy's existence, though few know about its content. You certainly don't.

War Never Changes (+400)

You were cursed with an interesting life, Jumper. Once a year, without fail, you will find yourself right in the middle of a life-threatening adventure, each worse than the last, until you leave this world.

There are no brakes on the Jumper-train, so brace yourself.

In Bad Taste (+400)

This story is set in the USA, after all. Your school grounds (or place of work later on) are attacked by one group or another quite often, pretty much once a month.

They are not directed at you, thankfully, but they are rather frequent and tend to happen near your location.

Good think that magic schools have such strong wards and staff members, right?

Safety Locked (+400)

What a terrible thing, Jumper. It seems that you have completely lost access to your Warehouse.

You may still access your Perks and Items from other Jumps, if you have the means to do so, but your personal safe space is now beyond your reach until you leave.

600CP Tier

Actual Gun Physics (+600)

You, Jumper, are not special like everyone else. You take bullet-like damage from magical bullets, regardless of the spells imbued into them. Even a muggle would be unhurt by a healing bullet, but not you. That bullet would heal you, but it would pierce through you first.

You also feel a recoil from firing magical bullets that you would otherwise not feel. In conclusion, all magic in this setting is now life-threatening to you, and much harder to use accurately.

Touched By Death (+600)

You are cursed with Dementor-like characteristics, Jumper, though on a softer level. Everyone is noticeably less happy around you, your body is cold and clammy all the time, and you look deathly pale. You also gain a sadistic streak, as seeing others in pain makes you feel great.

No, you won't be immortal, nor gain the ability to eat souls. You're just like a failed Dementor really. It's almost sad. As a result, Dementors constantly try to get close to you when they see you, to make you into a real Dementor, completely unaware of the effect they have on you and the people around.

Damaged (+600)

You, Jumper, suffer from the complete inability to feel emotions of any kind, except for fear and anger. You can still care about things, just seldom irrationally. You are also suffering from intense thanatophobia, the fear of death.

We all know where that led the last guy. Try not to follow in his footsteps, lest fate comes to take care of you, Jumper.

Big Iron On His Hip (+600)

And only that. In the spirit of keeping things fair, Jumper, you lose complete access to every Perks, Items, and buildings you gained from other Jumps. You won't see a shadow of them until you leave this world.

And if this is your first time, congratulations. Take your free CPs.

Special Tier

...What. (+800)

You can't take it, Jumper. You simply can't. The guns, the magic bullets, the random pseudo-murders between kids, the simple shots passed as magic, all of it, you just can't. And you must do something about it.

Not only do you now have a great aversion towards guns in general, Jumper, you are also stuck in this Jump for however long it takes you to achieve your goal. What is your goal, you ask?

Why, you must have all magic guns removed from circulation and replaced with wands instead!

That's right, Jumper. You won't be going anywhere until wizards the world over start making sense and use wands, as they rightly should. This will be an uphill battle, to say the least, as "everyone" includes people like Lord Voldemort.

Although, one could say that, should Jumper be the only wizard alive, then all wizards would be using a wand and, and all magic guns would be out of circulation. Something to consider, I suppose.

World Wars Three, Four, Five, and Fucking Six (+1000)

It's terrible, Jumper.

It all started when the magical world was discovered by the muggles. Then, everyone voted, and unanimously agreed, that the other side must be completely eradicated, for some inane reason.

You may not change their minds, and until one side commits genocide on the other, this world-breaking war will keep on going.

Good luck surviving.

Notes

- This is a Jump of the Harry Potter With Guns parody movie. Source : TvTropes
- Yes, the Jump writer has no knowledge whatsoever of America as a whole, has not read the HP books in over a decade, and hasn't seen this movie in 2.
- Yes, The Girl With No Name is essentially Haruhi Suzumiya, only on a country-wide level instead of universal.

Changelog

Version 1.1

Reworked the [The Power of Love] Perk to be targeted in a single Fated Enemy.
Clarified that the [The Child With the Gun-Shaped Scar] Scenario has no impact on Jumper's sex or appearance.
Enhanced the [Bob the Wizard] Perk.
Grammar fixes

Version 1.0

Jumpable